Chef Justin Brown Makes Miami Debut At Luxurious Aston Martin Residences

HAUTE CUISINE, HAUTE RESIDENCE, NEWS February 26, 2020 by Ashley Moore

This year's Wine & Food Week debuted with a bang when Chef Justin Brown introduced himself and his Royal British cuisine to Miami last Tuesday, February 18, during a demonstration at the upcoming Aston Martin Residences Kitchen. Global real estate developer, owner, and investor, G&G Business Developments, is currently constructing what will be Aston Martin Residences Miami—a luxurious, state-of-the-art condominium building planning to complete construction by 2022. This is the first real estate venture for Aston Martin, the independent, British manufacturer of luxury sports cars. What better way to debut the company's new opportunity than with the award-winning, British-born Chef, Justin Brown?

G&G Business Developments showcased the model kitchen design that will be incorporated into all 391 luxury condominiums and penthouses priced anywhere between the $750,000s to $50 million of Aston Martin Residences Miami. Each kitchen will include Bulthaup cabinets and Gaggenau appliances and will be designed by Marek Reichman, EVP and Chief Creative Officer at Aston Martin. The news of these spectacular amenities dropped when a select number of Miami's top real estate professionals and special guests were invited to Chef Justin Brown's demonstration set in one of these beautiful kitchens with an oceanfront backdrop.

After spending 15 years in the UK and Europe consulting for some of the top hotel groups and festivals, running Michelin Star status restaurants, and writing four cookbooks, Chef Justin Brown relocated to South Florida in January. Brown is an expert in both contemporary and classic British gastronomy and owns Bao Buns Amsterdam and The Chippy, located in Amsterdam—two culinary concepts he plans to open in Miami as well. Justin Brown specifically chose this special event to introduce himself to Miami and “to demonstrate the true character and essence of English culture and how you can really feel at home with your own comfortable style of cooking in the brilliance of an Aston Martin Residences Kitchen,” as he quotes.
