- Aston Martin has debuted its DBX SUV in the U.S. at the Aston Martin Residences in Miami.
- The 65-story, sail-shaped tower holds 391 apartments, priced from $970,000 to $50 million, with completion scheduled for 2022.
- Seven penthouses and 38 Signature Residences come with the buyer's choice of a limited edition DBX or a DB11, or the three-story penthouse comes with the final Aston Martin Vulcan.

For the owner who has said, "I love my Aston Martin so much I could live in it," the English purveyor of grand tourers would like to turn your attention to Miami. The Aston Martin Residences next to the Miami River, overlooking Biscayne Bay, are the automaker's first wholesale luxury residential development, a 65-story, sail-shaped tower with 391 apartments. The tower isn't scheduled for completion until 2022, but it enjoyed its christening when it hosted the debut of the DBX SUV in the Americas.

There should be plenty more examples of the DBX at the residences soon enough. Buyers of the 38 Signature apartments and seven penthouses will get to choose a housewarming gift of either a DBX Riverwalk Edition or DB11 Riverwalk Edition. Spec'd by Aston Martin's executive VP and chief creative officer Marek Reichman, the Riverwalk Editions are limited to 45 examples just for this building. If you're reaching for your calculators, know that Signature accommodations run from $5.3 million to $7.7 million, while single-level penthouses start at $14 million.

At the top of the sail sits a three-story penthouse, taking up 27,191 square feet and costing $50 million. Instead of a welcome-to-the-neighborhood carrot cake, that owner will receive the final Aston Martin Vulcan as spec'd by Reichman. The Vulcan was the carbon-fiber-bodied, track-only beast powered by a 7.0-liter V-12 with 820 horsepower, limited to 24 units and priced at $2.3 million.

Elsewhere among the luxury, in addition to a four-story suite of Sky Amenities such as a virtual golf room, chef's kitchen, and two cinemas, the Aston Martin Residences will incorporate a deep-water superyacht marina with direct access to Biscayne Bay. Aston Martin hasn't released a boat since the AM37 four years ago, but we can see that changing now.
