

LEFT: The penthouse's kitchen will feature Gaggenau appliances and Bulthaup cabinets. RIGHT: The residence offers city and water views from all its three levels.

Upping the ante is par for the course among Miami's luxury high-rises, where it seems no whim is too ambitious. The latest address to throw its hat in the ring is downtown's Aston Martin Residences, the first branded real estate project from the renowned British auto manufacturer. The tower's $59 million sky penthouse is the stuff of 1980s-greed-is-good dreams. As expected, the digs' design-centric touches by Aston Martin's UK-based team are on par with the price tag. We're talking Thassos marble on most of the penthouse's 19,868 interior square feet of space (that's three levels on floors 63, 64, and 65), custom built-ins and wall fixtures with red oak grown in the northeast United States, a winding staircase made of glass, crystal, and iron that mirrors the curved shape of the building, kitchens with Gaggenau appliances and Bulthaup cabinetry, baths with Italkraft storage, Hansgrohe showers, and Duravit basins, and tan door tabs and artisan door handles enhanced with Balmoral leather from the Scottish Highlands. Oh, and did we mention the penthouse's name is Unique? astonmartinresidences.com

86 FLORIDA DESIGN'S MIAMI EDITION 19-1 to highlight the penthouse's various rooms with concepts by different artists.